THE following Paper is printed precisely as read. My first thoughts was to endeavour to improve upon what was very hastily prepared. It appeared however upon reflection very difficult to elaborate that which, in its nature was a light and superficial composition. The reader's indulgence is confidently claimed for the bye-work of one who has imperative claims on his pen and time. The facts stated in the paper, are of course drawn from various authorities, but the opinions are those which I myself have long held in sincerity, and which I was glad of an opportunity to put forth.
